702 Library Programming Policy

The Library Programming Policy serves as an overall guide to our staff on how we decide what programs to offer the Iowa City Community. It provides information to our patrons and interested performers on how we use programs to fulfil the Library's mission. This is a routine, three-year policy review, last revised in 2017. The committee recommending changes consists of eight staff members who oversee many of our programs.

Main Issues:

Updated related policies to reflect the new name of policy 703: Recording and Streaming. The old name and updated wording related to policy 703 were updated throughout the document.

Other changes are updated wording in red.

Staff Recommendations:

Adopt changes as proposed.

Action Required:

Review policy and adopted as amended.

- 702.1 The purpose of Library programs at the Iowa City Public Library and in the community is to fulfill the Library's mission. Programs will include, ~~speeches~~ lectures, discussions, classes, workshops, presentations, and performances that promote life-long learning and Library use; enhance cultural and leisure activities; champion the principle of intellectual freedom; benefit the community; and foster an enduring connection to the Library.
- 702.2 Library programs for children are a priority and focus on stimulating development of the intellectual and social abilities of young children. Children's programming emphasizes literature, language, reading, creativity, and the encouragement of effective social skills. Programming may also ~~emphasizes~~ incorporate STEAM (science, technology, engineering, arts and math) activities. Programming is offered on a frequent and regular basis for in-house, outreach, and streaming to the Library Channel and web audiences.
- 702.3 Library programs for teens focus on literature, language, reading, technology, current interests, and creativity. The Library will plan unique programs to augment and enhance community events and to attract new audiences.
- 702.4 Library programs for adults focus on promoting reading and life-long learning; informing the community about Library collections and services; improving information literacy; preserving and teaching local history and genealogy; and covering issues of current local and global interest. The Library plans unique programs to augment and enhance community events and to attract new audiences.
- 702.5 Library programs do not duplicate programs offered within the community unless they support the Library's strategic plan, there is sufficient local interest, or library resources are available to support duplication.
- 702.6 All Library programs may appear streaming on The Library Channel, Library website, the Internet, and other media.
- 702.7 The Library does not proscribe or cancel a program solely because an individual or group may find the content objectionable.
- 702.8 The Library co-sponsors programs with other City departments, governmental agencies, community organizations, and businesses when they are compatible with the Library's program goals and priorities. Co-sponsored programs must include participation by Library staff to plan program content, provide logistical support, or include information about Library collections relevant to the program. Co-sponsorship and collaboration decisions are made on the basis of mutual needs and equitable benefits between the Library and potential partners, as well as available library resources.

703 Recording and Streaming Policy

Proposal:

Revise and update an existing policy as recommended

Issues:

A staff committee reviewed the policy and recommends changing its name to Recording and Video Streaming Policy better reflect the Library's current practice.

Staff Recommendations:

Action Required:

703 Change the name of the policy.

Iowa City's franchise with Mediacom expired on August 1, 2018 and the Library stopped hosting a public access channel. When this policy was last reviewed the Library had 228 videos on YouTube.com/thelibrarychannel. We currently have 675 videos accessible to the public. We are able share the live programs at the library through our YouTube.com/thelibrarychannel.

Change Cable Channel to video stream and add the video stream location. The removal of the other words help clarify the reason for video streaming library and/or community programs.

703.2 and 703.2

Drop. The library is no longer a local access television channel. There is no longer an emphasis on those who cannot come to the library, in particular children.

703.4 (2)

Change from cablecasting language to streaming. FCC regulations are no longer pertain to streaming services.

703.8 (6)

Change from broadcast to streamed

Director's Report: December 2019

On December 3, ICPL celebrated our "123rd Anniversary" at 123 S. Linn Street. Staff created an engaging display of photographs and archival items from the archives, the Children's Department presented a thematic Storytime event, and refreshments were offered in the Gallery throughout the day. This was a fun way to celebrate a milestone year and also served to get staff thinking about our upcoming 125th anniversary.

Also, on December 3, ICPL hosted the 2019 Johnson County Legislator's Reception. Elected officials, library board members, and library leadership from throughout Johnson county were invited to hear a presentation from Anne Mangano about eBook access and publishing restrictions, share updates, and enjoy refreshments and networking. We had a strong turnout and the event was well-received. Ms. Mangano's presentation was appreciated and generated a number of thoughtful questions from elected officials; many of whom did not know about the upcoming changes to eBook access.

ICPL was selected by the community for two of Little Village's 2019 "Best of the Crandic Awards": Best Library and Best Public Restrooms. This recognition is fun and staff is proud to be a favorite of our local users. We were awarded "Best Library" last year, as well, but "Best Public Restrooms" is a first for us. In a building that welcomes almost 2,000 people a day and is open long hours and weekends, we are fortunate to have a Facilities staff that can not only keep our restrooms functional and clean, but award-worthy! Kara Logsdon and I attended the award reception the evening of December 4th and heard many positive things from other attendees about the library. See attached for additional details.

We are not including a draft of the changing financials dashboard in this packet, since it feels more logical to wait until January, which would be a typical "budget month." Last month, it felt like trying to fit a new model into a non-reporting month created some obstacles. You will see our second version/draft next month.

We made some great progress on our strategic plan development this month. Between December 2nd and December 11th, we offered 15 community input sessions at the Library and in the community. This included two session for staff, a session for business leaders, a session for teens, a shortened session for adult caretakers of children, two sessions for 55+, a session for City Department Heads, and a community stakeholder meeting facilitated by our plan consultant, Maureen Sullivan (the rest I facilitated; Elyse Miller served as note taker at all sessions). We made sure to offer sessions at different times of the day and different days of the week—including weekends—to be as inclusive as possible. We offered paper surveys at service desks and an online survey through our website for people unable to attend an in-person group. Ms. Sullivan was onsite with us for three days, and we maximized her time here by including staff and community meetings, data review, and a half-day workshop with all staff at our Inservice Day on her schedule.

Staff Inservice Day was held on Friday, December 13th. Anne Mangano and Maeve Clark had leadership roles in planning the program, and they did an exceptional job. The first half of the day was spent with Maureen Sullivan working on the strategic planning process. The staff were very engaged and participatory, and I was proud of the high-level contributions made throughout the session. After a shared lunch, Officer Colin Fowler and Sergeant Andrew McKnight from the Iowa City Police Department presented tactics for verbal de-escalation for people in crisis, and Ally Harten and Talia Meidlinger from United Action for Youth presented "Strategies for Effectively Working with Teens and Tweens." A number of Board members joined us for the parts of the day; staff always appreciate having you present for this kind of shared work. Thank you for taking the time to learn with us.

Next month, we will present a six-month report on the impact of going fines free for Children's and Teen materials. Our plan is to provide comparison data (quarterly or six-month, depending on availability) from before going fine-free to now for the following categories:

- number of blocked children's cards
- number of blocked teen cards
- amount of fines collected
- number of lost Children's items billed
- number of lost Teen items billed

We will also collect and share staff feedback on how the shift to fine free has impacted their work and patron feedback about the change. If there is additional data you would like collected, please share the specifics during our December meeting so we can accommodate your request.

Respectfully Submitted,

Elsworth Carman

Children's Services Report

Prepared for the Iowa City Public Library Board of Trustees, December 2019 meeting

By Angela Pilkington, Children's Services Coordinator

2019 is rapidly coming to a close and the Children's Room is busier than ever, planning end of the year events, like a Noon Year's Eve party, Gingerbread Fun, and the Winter Reading Program. Be sure to promote this program to the kids in your life! We are also looking ahead to 2020 with some big events on our horizon, such as the One Book Two Book Festival, ABC Day, and Summer Reading.

The annual Tween Chess Tournament was another great success. Over 75 tweens participated in this staple of the Library's tween programming. The tournament is held in honor of Steve Young, who was active in the community's chess population until his death in 2012. The picture at the bottom of the page shows the intensity of the day.

Each fall, the Iowa City Community School District brings in an author as part of their Visiting Author program. This year they brought in Melissa Sweet, a picture book illustrator and author for the 3rd & 4th graders to meet. As part of the partnership, the visiting author also comes to the library to do a filmed interview. It was fantastic getting to listen and talk with her.

The National Federation for the Blind also presented a Family Storytime that featured braille stories. After the storytime, a chapter member helped the kids write their name in braille and answered many questions. It was a great experience for the kids in attendance.

We also hosted Dr. Jennifer Harvey, Professor at Drake University and author of Raising Anti-Racist White Kids in November. Her presentation to parents on her book mapped the common problems relative to nurturing anti-racist white identity.

We have welcomed many wonderful donations of Legos after the winter edition of the Window hit mailboxes featuring a young college student handing me his childhood tote of Legos. We are always thankful of thoughtful donations from our community.

Collection Services Department Report

On December 3rd, the Iowa City Public Library celebrated its 123rd anniversary: 123 at 123 S. Linn St. (and some other addresses along the way). Multiple departments pulled together to create a wonderful display of ICPL milestones and memories and there was a celebratory storytime and cookies. Please make sure to stop and see the display in the gallery.

Children's Large Print

Through the generosity of a grant from the Pilot Club of Iowa City, we are adding a collection of large print books to the Ellen Buchanan Children's Room to support the development of literacy and to foster a love of reading among our community's youth. Library professional literature shows that children with visual challenges, learning differences or difficulties, and reading comprehension challenges benefit from large print texts.

According to a new study by Project Tomorrow/Thorndike Press, large print books are proven tools for students in grades 3 through 12 in developing reading skills and becoming more comfortable as readers.¹ Although the study focused on large print texts in the classroom, we hope the benefits reported in this study will extend to our patrons at ICPL, connecting our readers with books in a new format. We have received requests for large print titles from both parents and children. Children are not the only groups to benefit from this collection. Adults acquiring English skills and reading proficiency also ask for children's titles in large print because they want titles that allow them to focus on comprehending words and sentences as opposed to complex storylines. We believe that including large print books in our collection will provide more options to our youngest patrons to engage with books.

A collection of 121 titles will be available to check out from the Children's Room this coming January. Items can be checked out for three weeks and renewed two times if eligible. No fines will be associated with this collection.

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY REPORT TO LIBRARY BOARD

December, 2019

Brent Palmer, IT Coordinator

Cloud Migration Notes

At a recent board meeting some of the trustees asked about the possibilities for migration of Library IT services to the cloud. This report discusses some of the issues or tradeoffs within the context of the Library's IT infrastructure.

Many Choices

One of the difficulties in considering a migration to the cloud is the different levels of services available. For example, you can rent a whole machine and run your servers on it. But you can also just rent space on a machine. Your (virtual) servers run alongside other customers' servers somewhere in the world. Furthermore, it is also possible to just pay a subscription to a particular type of service (like email or data storage) where we don't have any interaction with the operating system at all.

Let's say you need some space for a project or business and you don't want to buy your own building. You could rent a building for your project and use it for various purposes. But perhaps you don't want to take on the difficulties associated with managing a whole building. You may only want to rent part of the space and let the landlord handle those tasks. On the other hand, perhaps you can just hire a vendor to provide many of the services for your project.

The Benefits

Generally, the benefits of migrations to the cloud are reduced cost and increased reliability. In the context of the previous analogy, ICPL currently owns and manages three "buildings" plus an extra storage unit available to all of them not to mention a backup power plant. In this scenario we would be responsible for the building upkeep, insurance, utility bills, and costs associated with hiring trades people. In computing systems, there are similar costs: cooling, electricity and backup power, hardware maintenance costs, software licenses and storage costs.

Cost

Much of the cost benefits of cloud services come from the economy of scale. Since these servers are housed in huge data centers, the cost of the infrastructure for electricity, cooling and redundancy is not only cheaper because of the volume, but it is distributed among many other organizations.

Reliability

When it comes to computing systems, we often strive for redundancy by having two of everything (two power sources, two switches, two hard drives etc.) If one goes offline, the other can step in temporarily. In cloud computing, this redundancy is shared by everyone. This makes the reliability much cheaper and easier.

Tradeoffs

Security/Privacy

Security is a difficult one to evaluate because there are different types of security. Depending on the level of service, you may have less control over the security measures as well as the physical media your data is on. On the other hand, companies offering cloud computing services tend to sell security as a feature and encourage or even enforce best practices. In terms of privacy, most of staff communication falls under open-records laws so this is not as high of a priority as it would be for a private company. But we do place a high value on protecting our patron data.

Bandwidth/Connectivity

Bandwidth inside the organization is generally not a limiting factor, but bandwidth to the outside usually is. In cloud computing, you usually pay for how much you use. But the fees for Internet connection to the Library are based on how much capacity you have. Bandwidth usage is shifted to the cloud for some services (like your web site) since the public will be hitting other servers instead of yours. For email or other internal processes, you would be using more because the information is flowing back and forth to outside servers. This makes comparing bandwidth costs difficult to determine. In terms of connectivity the risks are shifted around. If for example you have servers inside your network and a fiber is cut down the street, you still have internal email and patrons are still checking out books. On the other hand, if your servers are in the cloud your website is still up but you may not have email. A redundant connection to the Internet becomes way more important for keeping your staff able to do their work.

Carbon

The City of Iowa city has declared a climate crisis and has asked that all operations be evaluated, in part, through that lens. The energy required for cooling and powering servers is significant. Would moving to the cloud result in less emissions? I don't think that anyone knows the answer. Based on what I've read, it seems intuitive that cloud computing could result in less carbon emissions, but in reality, it would depend on a lot of factors.

Summary

When trying to weigh the benefits and risks of migrating services to the cloud there are a number of difficulties. It's not a simple decision since there are many ways to implement the migration. On the face of it, the cost savings appear to be significant, but there are hidden costs that may be difficult to quantify. In terms of other factors like bandwidth, connectivity and security it's hard to determine whether there would be an improvement or the opposite.

Groundbreaking New Children's Collection

The Iowa City Public Library will be the first in eastern Iowa to offer patrons large print children's books to support literacy development for those experiencing difficulty reading. Thanks to a generous grant from the Pilot Club of Iowa City, 221 special large print fiction and non-fiction books will soon be available to borrow from ICPL. Sioux City is the only other library in the state to offer large print children's books.

Large print books include text with a larger font size, maximized spacing between characters and lines, more contrast between text and page, and fewer words and lines on a page. Library professional literature shows that children with visual challenges, learning differences or difficulties, and reading comprehension challenges benefit from large print texts. At ICPL, we strive to offer more equitable access to all our readers.

The Pilot Club of Iowa City grant was awarded in the Brain Safety and Fitness category which focuses on projects that improve the lives of those affected by brain-related disorders. Thank you to Pilot Club members for their support!

Honoring Maeve Clark

Everyone is welcome to help us say adieu to Maeve Clark, ICPL's long-time Adult Services Coordinator. Maeve's retirement reception will be on Friday, December 20 from 11 am-1:30pm. There will be a brief program at 12:15pm.

We look forward to seeing you in Meeting Room A. The reception is hosted by the ICPL Friends Foundation. Light refreshments will be served.

Give Today

Make a big difference for everyone with a financial contribution today to the ICPL Friends Foundation. Besides adding a lot more for everyone to experience through the Library, donations to the Friends Foundation enable the ICPL to try initiatives such as fine free children's and young adult materials. Click on the green donate button to give today. Thank you.

Fantastic Arts and Crafts Bazaar and Book Sale

The line of eager Bazaar and Book Sale customers went down the hall and into the lobby on Saturday, December 7 until the meeting room doors opened. Five hours later, sales reached nearly $7,000 for hundreds of handmade treasures and books. Thank you to everyone who donated crafts and shopped!

"Star Wars: The Rise of Skywalker" sees the end of the Skywalker saga that first began in 1977 with "Star Wars: A New Hope." It's an exciting and emotional time for Star Wars fans. As a lifelong Star Wars fan, I've spent as much time with Star Wars books as I have the movies. I read three very different and equally great books this year that I'd recommend to new and returning fans alike.

"Master & Apprentice" by Claudia Gray is set before the events of "The Phantom Menace" and focuses on the relationship between Qui-Gon Jinn (played by Liam Neeson in the movie) and Obi-Wan Kenobi. The two are uneasy partners with each thinking that they are failing the other. They are soon pulled into an assignment with one of Jinn's old friends, the Jedi Rael Averross. Averross is the acting Regent of the planet Pijal and protector of its young ruler, Princess Fanry. There are concerns that her life is in danger as she comes of age. Jinn and Kenobi are sent to assist, and there is more going on than they realize. Jedi prophecy plays a central role, which is fascinating. Also, it really fleshes out the training and politics of the Jedi.

The next book is "Alphabet Squadron" by Alexander Freed. It reminded me of the "Rogue Squadron" books that I read in middle school -- in a good way. It marries one of my favorite parts of Star Wars -- space ship battles -- with great character work. The story follows Yrica Quell, an Imperial defector post-Return of the Jedi. She's recruited by New Republic intelligence for a very specific mission: hunt down Shadow Wing, which are Quell's old squadmates. To do this, she helps form the eponymous Alphabet Squadron along with a motley crew of ace pilots, each flying a different letter-named ship, with Quell in the lead with an X-Wing. All of the characters are damaged in some way, and it's satisfying to see them come together to take on the Imperial remnant.

"Resistance Reborn" by Rebecca Roanhorse probably has the broadest appeal, as it is a bridge novel between "The Last Jedi" and "The Rise of Skywalker." It follows a bunch of characters, including some deep cuts for folks who play Star Wars video games and read comics, but Poe and Leia are definitely the stars. They have to rebuild the Resistance after its almost complete defeat on Crait by the First Order at the end of "The Last Jedi." The Resistance is desperate. They need leaders and they need ships, and Poe and Leia have a plan to get both. The characters' voices are spot-on, which is always hard to pull off, especially the dry humor of some. This book is a treat if you're looking for something to lead into the new movie.

You can find all of these Star Wars books and many more at the Iowa City Public Library. May the Force be with you!

How can it be that the Woodstock was half-a-century ago? Music that baby boomers appreciated and internalized from the 1960s through the 1980s has become the subject of countless history books. The following titles have that history, and also are full of the energy, color, and rock and roll of some of the legends of 20th century music.

“Supreme Glamour” by Mary Wilson and Mark Bego traces the history of the Supremes through the gowns they wore. Spanning almost two decades, the trio began with hand-sewn dresses and evolved into matching glamour gowns, mini dresses, and pantsuits. Beads, baubles, fringe, sequins, and vibrant color are present in almost every photo.

“Woodstock: 50 Years of Peace and Music” by Daniel Bukszpan is a fascinating, mostly pictorial history of the three-day outdoor music concert near Woodstock, New York in August, 1969. It begins with short essays about how the festival came to be, and then details each day with artist photos and the set lists of songs that were performed. There are also side stories about such realities as food, bathrooms, and garbage when 400,000 people are crowded together in a small space. I wasn’t there, but feel like I have a better sense of what it was like after reading this book.

More comprehensive coverage of American songs and the role they can play in history is presented in “Songs of America: Patriotism, Protest, and the Music That Made a Nation” by Jon Meacham and Tim McGraw. The 1963 March on Washington is described in songs and pictures in the chapter “We Shall Overcome”, and “Born in the U.S.A.” covers the 1990s up to September 11, 2001. The history of the country in patriotic songs is presented in readable style.

Biographical information and loads of pictures are part of the large-format book “Elton John: Rocket Man” by Chris Roberts. A discography of all of Elton John’s albums is interspersed chronologically among the photos of his costumes, concerts, and philanthropic activities. The text begins with his first performances as a teenager, and carries through to the farewell tour of 2019.

Grace Slick, The Bangles, Annie Lennox, Aretha Franklin, Amy Winehouse: these are only five of the 50 women described in “Rock-and-Roll Woman: the 50 Fiercest Female Rockers” by Meredith Ochs. Each artist gets several pages of pictures and a brief history. While many of these female rockers are well-known, it is almost certain you will be introduced to some you have not heard of before.

“Ricochet: David Bowie 1983: An Intimate Portrait” by Denis O’Regan is a photographic account of Bowie’s “Serious Moonlight” world tour. Exotic concert locations, adoring audiences, mundane airport and motels, and famous friends provide a riveting view of a life that few of us have experienced.

After three decades, Iowa City Public Library employee Maeve Clark is retiring.

"I probably would have become a journalist, but I'm a poor speller," she said, adding she grew up delivering newspapers in Tipton, in a family of journalists.

Former Iowa City Public Library Director Susan Craig said Clark was "instrumental" as the library endured the rapidly changing landscape of technology and the internet over the past 25 years.

From her post of Adult Services Coordinator, Clark helped develop a new teen center and digital media lab, in addition to hosting programs, such as Irving Weber Days, which shed light on local historical events. Several current and former colleagues also praised her ability to connect with people with her sense of humor and passion for information.

"But, Maeve is a people person," said Craig. "She has never met a stranger and has been a welcoming face to thousands of users."

Several years after studying anthropology as an undergrad at the University of Iowa, she got her master's degree in library and information science.

Eventually, she picked up public library jobs in Ames, for one year, and then in Dubuque, for six years. She ended up at the Iowa City Public Library for good in 1992.

Clark said some of her favorite things about the public library are learning how to find information, separating facts from falsehoods and using those skills to become better citizens. Part of doing the job well is having the right technology available.

Through the digital media lab, she said library users can walk in and learn anything from how to fill out a job application online to using Adobe Creative Suite programs.

Still, she said there's one thing that most folks might not completely understand about the library as a resource.

"I think the biggest secret is the people who work here and how they can help you," she said.

Outside of the library, locals might recognize Clark for her role on a radio program. She has been a co-host on KXIC's Downtown Dish with Bill Nusser, owner of Hands Jewelers, for several years.

"She always knows the most interesting questions to ask and elicits the best remarks," he said. "She seems to retain information and recall it at the snap of a finger."

He's excited to see what she does in retirement.

After she retires on Jan. 3, Clark said she hopes to work at Salvage Barn and continue handing out tickets at Film Scene.

"Both are fun ways to connect with people," she said.

The public is invited to a retirement reception for Clark on Friday, Dec. 20 from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in Meeting Room A of the Library, 123 S. Linn Street.

New library card aims to increase literacy among students in Iowa City schools

A new "AIM" library card created as a result of the partnership between the Iowa City School District and the Iowa City, North Liberty, and Coralville libraries gives students access to more literary materials in the area.

A new library card will offer students in the Iowa City Community School District access to public libraries in Iowa City, Coralville, and North Liberty by using their student-identification number.

The card, titled "AIM," will first be offered to students on Dec. 16 with a goal to increase student literacy.

The "AIM" card, which stands for "Student Access to Information and Materials," is a liability-free card aimed to increase literacy among Iowa City Community School District students without worry of fines for late or missing materials, Iowa City Public Library Children's Services Coordinator Angela Pilkington said.

"We want to be very forgiving with this card and just make sure that their experience with their school library in the library here are both positive ones," she said.

Starting Monday, the card will begin its "test year" with a goal of focus solely on literacy, she said.

Pilkington and Iowa City Community School District Library Coordinator Kristi Harper created the “AIM” card as a result of attending a conference titled “Stronger Together” in Omaha, Nebraska, which focused on similar programs in other cities, Pilkington said.

In particular, Pilkington said that hearing from the Los Angeles Public Library System — which provides cards to around 678,000 students — made her excited to implement a similar program in the Iowa City area. Once she heard how many students the Los Angeles Public Library System had issued, she said that she knew Iowa City could offer similar benefits to the 15,000 kids local to the area.

“We want to be the students place to go when they don’t have access to their school,” she said.

Coralville Public Library Youth Services Director Sarah Glenn said that she is most excited about the access that these cards give to students who aren’t already using the library. She said that it is important that this program is reaching students across the Johnson County area.

“Iowa City spans the three public library service areas, so it just made sense for all of us to participate for the students because we would hate to exclude anyone,” she said.

Erin Silva, youth services manager for North Liberty Community Library, said she and Pilkington have collaborated on projects in the past, so when she heard about the “AIM” card, she was thrilled.

She said that the idea of any student in the Iowa City School District being able to check out books — either for school or personal enjoyment — made excited her.

Additionally, Silva said that North Liberty Community Library was lucky to have access to Iowa City Public Library’s resources. Giving students access to these resources no matter where they live was a really important aspect of this card, she said.

“It’s funny how many patrons think their Iowa City Library card works at Coralville and North Liberty anyway,” Silva said. “So it makes sense to have the student access cards so students can come in without any barriers.”

The costs associated with the program are primarily centered around staff time, promotional materials, and the expected cost of lost materials, Pilkington said. However, those involved value the increased literacy more than these expenses, she said.

For now, students using the “AIM” card will be able to check out three literary materials at a time, Pilkington said. She said the card is evolving, so students may be able to check out DVDs, video games, or other technology in the future.

“I know it will succeed when students are coming in using it and they have that supplemental access to literacy,” Pilkington said.

Three Linn County libraries to eliminate fines for overdue materials

The Cedar Rapids Public Library, 450 5th Avenue SE — Zak Neumann/Little Village

The public libraries in Cedar Rapids, Hiawatha and Marion are moving forward with the elimination of fines for overdue materials in an effort to better support and serve the community.

The policy change has been approved by the boards of trustees of all three libraries. Cedar Rapids Public Library (CRPL) director Dara Schmidt said the next step is to figure out the details and the best way to make the transition smooth for patrons. The change is expected to take effect in July 2020, which is the start of the next fiscal year.

The three libraries make up the Metro Library Network, which allows patrons to access materials that any of the libraries own. The libraries also work together to cooperate on policies so patrons have a “seamless library service,” Schmidt said.

“We’re here for service to the community, and we can’t justify any more this policy that’s existed practically since the beginning of the public library in the 1800s that nobody has ever really looked into to see if it actually does what it’s supposed to do,” Schmidt said.

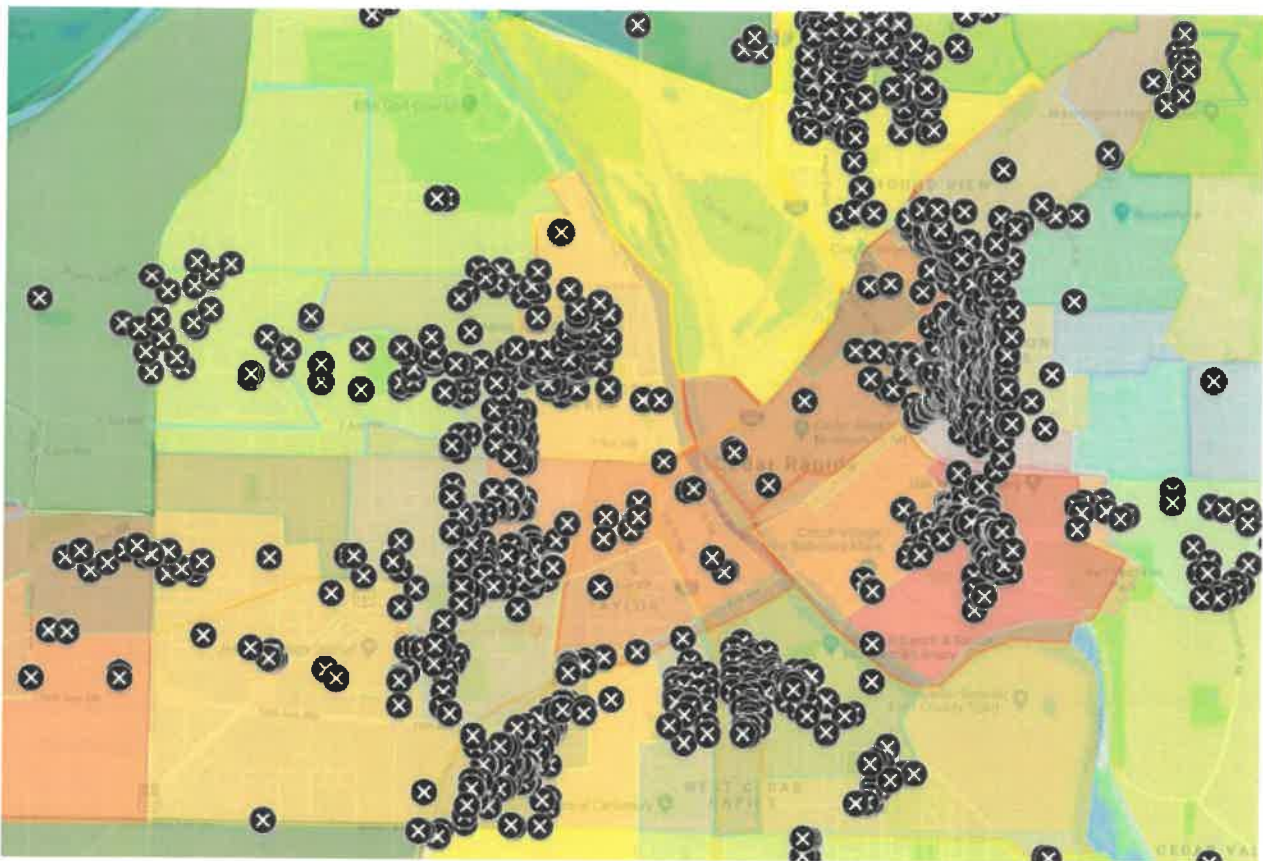

Around 500 public libraries across the country have gotten rid of their fines, according to the CRPL's fine and fee policy report that was presented at the Dec. 5 Board of Trustees meeting.

Libraries in West Liberty, West Branch and Ely have eliminated their fines. Iowa City Public Library eliminated fines for children's and young adult materials earlier this year.

As of June 2019, more than 16,000 patrons in the Metro Library Network have had their library cards blocked due to outstanding library fines or fees. About 12,000 of those people are in Cedar Rapids, according to Schmidt.

"That's absolutely unacceptable," Schmidt said. "We're here for the people. We want our citizens to be able to be patrons of our libraries, and they want to, too. They've used the library. They actively used the library, and then they were told, nope, you can't use it anymore because of these late [fines]."

In its report, CRPL mapped the addresses of the blocked cards and found that majority of the individuals live in low-income areas.

Schmidt said the feedback so far to the policy change has been mostly positive, but there are individuals concerned about books being lost or never returned.

In their research, the CRPL found that libraries without fines don't have a significantly different return rate for items than libraries with fines.

"The overdue fines are just one tiny portion of an overall materials retention and stewardship policy that the library has," Schmidt said. "So we're changing one small piece of that process that has been researched and shown to not actually work."

Curious what's happening this weekend? Sign up here to stay in the know.

What the libraries are proposing is as long as the book is returned within a grace period — possibly six months — there will be no charges. After a certain point, however, the patron will be charged for the lost item and blocked from checking out more materials until the item is returned or paid for. There will be increased reminders sent out to patrons to ensure they are aware of the due date.

It has been costly for the CRPL to keep up with collecting fines. In the 2019 fiscal year, fine and fee revenue was slightly more than $78,000 but collecting the fines was almost $57,000, resulting in a net revenue of $21,400. The library anticipates the revenue will continue to decrease as the popularity of digital materials increases.

The three libraries have also been participating in a Food for Fines program, where patrons are able to donate nonperishable food items to lower their fines.

While this program will likely go away once the Cedar Rapids, Hiawatha and Marion libraries eliminate their fines, Schmidt said there are still ways for the library to partner with community agencies and collect food. She worked at a library 10 years ago that went fine free and did a Food for No Fines program instead, in which individuals donated extra change saved from a lack of fines.

The no-fine policy will begin in July — fortuitous timing, Schmidt said, as it coincides with the summer reading program.

"That's our great hope," Schmidt said about the lack of fines potentially boosting summer reading. "Right now we've got families not participating in [the summer reading program] because their library cards are blocked, and we would be so excited to welcome to kids and families back in the summer."

Ending library fines is the right thing to do

Staff Editorial

December 12,
2019

There is an encouraging new trend in public libraries across the nation, and a few Eastern Iowa entities are among the early adopters.

Three public libraries in Linn County have adopted policies against conventional late fines, which experts studying the issue say are counterproductive. Cedar Rapids, Marion and Hiawatha join libraries in Dubuque, Iowa City and Sheldon that have some form of a no-late-fee policy.

It may seem counterintuitive, but there is considerable evidence that imposing monetary fines for past-due returns actually has a negative impact on material retention. That's because people who can't afford the fines might just keep the books and stop visiting the library.

Of course, that outcome runs contrary to libraries' basic mission, which includes offering free access to information to all residents, regardless of their ability to pay.

To allay the fears of library traditionalists, this change does not constitute an invitation to hoard library books without consequence.

Under the policy set to take effect next year in the Cedar Rapids area's Metro Library Network, borrowers' accounts would be blocked after materials are 30 days overdue, and the person would receive a bill to replace the unreturned item. At that point, the patron has six months to return the item without penalty before the charge is turned over to a collection agency.

So, borrowers still have incentives to return materials in a timely fashion, but the traditional late-fee model is an outdated practice that has not been shown to improve outcomes for library users.

PRINTS & POLITICS E-NEWSLETTER

A lighthearted look at Iowa political news right in your inbox.

In some extreme cases, people have even been detained by law enforcement over their failure to pay library fees. In 2009, an Eastern Iowa woman was taken to jail after she reportedly refused the Jesup Public Library's attempts to retrieve a borrowed book or a replacement payment.

It's difficult to see how cases like that represent a good use of time for the library staff or the police department, especially considering the book in question was valued at $13.95.

This year, Chicago Public Libraries became the biggest system in the nation to switch away from late fees. Library officials have reported significant increases in book returns and overall use of the library. We are hopeful that Eastern Iowa libraries will see similar results.

Library professionals in the Metro-Library Network deserve credit for their forward-thinking approach and promoting library access for all.

ICPL Trustees December 2019 President's Report

Director Annual Review Update

The subcommittee shared a survey with the staff and received a solid 49 responses. We have done initial analysis of the results and will use the aggregate information to inform our report and recommendation next month. As a next step we plan to distribute a similar survey to the trustees themselves to add their perspective and from there we hope to create our final recommendations and feedback.

Strategic Plan Update

The strategic planning process is now underway, with a number of meetings having occurred with staff, the foundation board, trustees, the community, and our consultant. We've started to take initial steps toward formulating this and outlined upcoming process in a recent meeting. As trustees we want to support the staff in defining things, asking that we receive regular updates along the way so we can ask questions and avoid surprises. If anyone has particular ideas they want to ensure are considered, now is a great time to bring them forward.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES

Minutes of the Regular Meeting

DRAFT

November 21, 2019

Members Present: Wesley Beary, John Beasley, Kellee Forkenbrock (via Zoom), Carol Kirsch, Robin Paetzold, Tom Rocklin (by phone), Hannah Shultz, Monique Washington.

Members Absent: Derek Johnk.

Staff Present: Elsworth Carman, Maeve Clark, Kara Logsden, Anne Mangano, Patty McCarthy, Elyse Miller, Brent Palmer, Jason Paulios, Angela Pilkington.

Guests Present: None.

Call Meeting to Order. President Beary called the meeting to order at 5:03 pm.

Public Discussion. None.

Items for Discussion/Action.

Policy Review: 601 Collection Development. This is a regularly scheduled policy review. Beasley asked about the terms "not archival" and "comprehensive" in 601.22. Mangano explained our library collects materials for the general population and intellectual freedom is a cornerstone of our collection policy. Beasley also asked about restricting access to materials by age. Mangano said parents are responsible for "restricting" access; the library does not. Beasley felt the language in 601.36 about physically owning materials is confusing and suggested some changes. This language will be changed. A motion to approve the policy with the revisions made by staff and including the suggestions made by Beasley was made by Kirsch and seconded by Shultz. Motion carried 8/0.

Staff Reports.

Director's Report. Carman said there was a highly engaged group of nearly 100 attendees at the Raising Anti-racist children program. We have nine RSVPs for the 12/3/19 PLJC Legislative Reception so far. The spring bookmobile schedule has been published. Angie provided an update on the AIM card. Carman noted that in addition to the planters, "watch your step," signs have been added to help indicate the step outside the entrance. Discussion is still underway with consultants to determine if any other solutions are needed. Carman is interested to see what will happen to this area when there is snow and snow removal is required. Board members feel this needs to be addressed and finalized because these are critical safety issues. Carman will confer with City Administration again to see about a hopefully quicker resolution to this problem. Angie met with Iowa City Community School District (ICCS), Coralville Public Library (CPL) and North Liberty Community Library (NLCL) and 12/16/19 is the official launch date for the AIM card. This coincides with winter break and will hopefully encourage students to use the new AIM card while their school libraries are

Departmental Reports:

Adult Services. Happy retirement to Maeve.

Community & Access Services. None.

Development Office. Thanks to everyone who attended the Book Gala. Twenty more people attended the event than last year. McCarthy believes having authors at Prairie Lights was helpful. The annual appeal was distributed in the winter Window. McCarthy reports we are $10,000 ahead of last year's donations and attributes $7,000 directly to the envelope in the Window newsletter. This included several new donors. The Arts & Crafts Bazaar is Saturday, December 7, 2019, from 10:00 am to 3:00 pm. McCarthy said $85,000 was raised from Community Foundation Gift Day.

Spotlight on the Collection. No comments.
