ECO Iowa City draws to a close

To come together and collaborate. We at environmental groups have been able home more energy efficient.

By putting in a bit of your own rain barrel, and making your environmental groups. It presented agencies as well as local and regional sustainability in Iowa City. Efforts began through an ICMA Public Library.

Library staff features Drill Team

The Iowa City Downtown Iowa City Parade route, 5:45 p.m. Friday, October 1; “rolliNg rEad-out” and challenged books. Join us to read too!

interpretations while reading from banned books. This is a great opportunity to have recently published a book of general interest.

This is a great opportunity to purchase a new book and have it signed by the author at the same time. Barnes & Noble of Coralville will be responsible for sales of participating authors’ works at the event.

This free event is open to the public as well as ILA members and aspirants of any age from across Iowa. The ILA annual conference.

The ILA advocates for quality library services for Iowans and provide leadership, education and support for its 15,000 members.

The Iowa Center for the Book, Iowa Library Association, Coralville Public Library, and Iowa City Public Library are partnering to bring “The Wine Stroll” to the public and members of the Coralville Public Library from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, October 13. “The Wine Stroll” will feature approximately 30 authors who live and write in Iowa and who have recently published a book of general interest.

This is a great opportunity to purchase a new book and have it signed by the author at the same time. Barnes & Noble of Coralville will be responsible for sales of participating authors’ works at the event.

This free event is open to the public as well as ILA members and aspirants of any age from across Iowa. The ILA annual conference.

The ILA advocates for quality library services for Iowans and provide leadership, education and support for its 15,000 members.

Holly Carver is the newest appointee to the Library Board of Directors. She is in her second year on the Board. Carver is a program consultant for the University of Iowa Press. She says she had an intense 15-month period to integrate into the library system of the University of Iowa. “The Wine Stroll” is the latest event in the “Iowa City Reads” series.

Find event in the Newsroom at newsroom.icpl.org. Stay Connected. Find us on Facebook, Twitter, flickr.com/icpl fans, and on Flickr at newsroom.icpl.org.

Have you heard of the new circulating collection of large picture books as part of its commitment to encouraging early literacy awareness. Call it “Big Books,” these items are oversized versions of familiar stories and poems which can be used during circle reading sessions.

Many of these books are good for cooperative activities as they are ideal for teaching and child care providers to share with groups of children because of their large illustrations. Their extra-large print means they are also good for one-on-one use by parents with beginning readers, when children may need extra help focusing.
Wade Society honors legacy of Library Association’s first president

Martin J. Wade was the first president of the Iowa City Public Library Association. His remarks at the 187th Library dedication ceremony will resonate today. The Iowa City Public Library Friends Foundation has established the Martin J. Wade Society as a tribute to him.

Patrons of the Iowa City Public Library greatly benefit from contributions to the Iowa City Public Library Friends Foundation. Gifts to the annual fund help the Library purchase materials immediately. Contributions can be named members of the Martin J. Wade Society in two ways. Membership in the Wade Plan gift will honor those who pledge to make a planned gift (a gift deferred until after death) to the Iowa City Public Library Friends Foundation.

Your contributions will provide the Library with the necessary funds to continue operating programs and services. Contributions can be made online or over the phone. For more information, contact the Development Department at 319-356-5200.